

Filmography of Filipino Films 2008

Introduction by Lucenio Martin L. Lauzon

Compiled by Berinice I. Zamora,

Lynette S. Quintillan, and Pol del Mundo

In the local film annals, 2008 may be registered as significant as it was the year that the Philippines made it back to Cannes after 24 years. Festival des Cannes is, of course, the most prestigious of the world's leading filmfests and the entry to main competition of Brillante Mendoza's Serbis was a major feat not to be taken for granted. Prior to Serbis, there were only two instances that the Philippines qualified for the main competition at Cannes: in 1980 with Jaguar and in 1984 with Kapit sa Patalim. Behind both films was the late master director Lino Brocka.

Serbis was just one of the year's 36 standard releases easily outnumbered by a flood of digital features, all with full theatrical run and no less limited to those produced for Cinemalaya, Cinemania Digital Lokal and Cinema One competitions. The quantity, however, of the digital features was no indication of their lucrative viability. The profitable ventures of the year were still confined to the staple fare from the studios propelled by network television in manifestation of the entertainment industry trend that may take an entire era to reverse.

Proving the point was Star Cinema as the most prolific production outfit in the land with a total output of eight releases as challenged by nearest rival Regal Entertainment with seven. The usual genres made their presence felt, with comedy topping the list. Providing somewhat a breath of fresh air was the entry of two animated features that must have proved a novelty in themselves.

Apart from the Cannes stamp, Serbis held another distinction as the only one of the year's regular releases to be slapped with an R rating by the Movie and Television Review and Classification Board (MTRCB). Apparently, mainstream producers had gunned for general patronage and shunned risks entailed by sensitive material in the hope of a guaranteed return of investment.

It was the opposite case for digital features, especially with the proliferation of gay-oriented titles catering to a dominant niche in the movie-going population. All these instantly got Rs and practically, digital filmmaking in the country came to be equated with them. The year closed with the 34th Metro Manila Film Festival with a curious selection of eight entries all exuding the temperament and sensibility that an accomplished film like Serbis precisely sought to depart from and vanquish for all intents and purposes.

For this filmography, each entry contains: 1) the title of the film; 2) genre, running time (in hours and minutes), MTRCB classification; 3) short synopsis; and 4) production data. Abbreviations for the latter are: P = Production Company, D = Director, ST = Story, OST = Original Story, SP = Screenplay, A = Actors, PD = Production Design, C = Cinematography, DOP = Director of Photography, E = Editor, M = Music, S = Sound, TS = Theme Song, and OTS = Original Theme Song.
